HONGKONG, SATURDAY, JANUARY 28, 1905.

A COMPARISON.

ATTACHED the people of Russia have been fighting furiously against the minions of the authorities for days past all effort has been spasmodic. As yet no leader has come forward to control the various bands in the several cities now registering their hatred against the Tsar and his autocracy.When the risings first began it was generally believed that a revolution was commencing. Perhaps it is, but according to Reuter's telegrams which we publish today the authorities are gradually securing the upper hand.This is only natural in the absence of some strong man or body of men to take charge of the people's campaign, and the tardiness displayed by a controlling force coming forward almost makes it certain that the risings will be suppressed and the Revolutionary Party willnever act tyrannically as kings and priests had too often done. The meeting of the Three Estates, that is the representatives of the clergy, the nobles, and the people, gave the opportunity without which possibly the Revolutionwould not have happened then. The King summoned the famous Assembly which had not been called for one hundred and seventy-five years, because he wanted money, and the conflagration burst forth.It is doubtful if these conditions obtain in Russia today.
The nobles and the people make the laws, and they are very unlike the writings which were the forerunners of the French upheaval. There is no States-General by which the people can make their voices heard and their demands known. In a word, those who feel the burdens intolerable to be borne, do not apparently see how to act nor are there leaders who will go before them into the Promised Land of freedom or into a worthy grave.The consequence was that the people groaned being burdened. The same condition of things, apparently, obtains in Russia today.The nobles and the people make the laws, and the people groan under them. It is said that taxes are heavy.
It must be allowed, that in the light of freedom from enforced military service, which obtains both in Great Britainand America, compulsion to serve in the army, and to fight battles with an unknown people on an alien soil, is obnoxious to the working people, who have to offer their sons on the altar of sacrifice and, at the same time, find the means that their sons may be shot down.When we turn to the question of political and religious freedom, the condition of things is even less in harmony with modern ideas, and the usages which are in practice in otherEuropean countries, Turkey excepted.
Without referring at length to the strict supervision of the press, which is irritating to the last degree, andwhich, in happier lands, would not be tolerated for a moment, we have but to glance at the stern repression of religious thought that seems to be as natural in Russia as the repression of robbery is in England. The persecution of the Jews which is conducted withruthless severity, characterised the days of the Normans in Great Britain. But even if there were an excuse for this, none can be discovered for the persecution of the Stundists, and other innocent sects which certainly might be allowed freedom of conscience, and the elementary right to gather for worshipin the way that seemeth the best unto them. But nothing of the kind is allowed, because the orthodox church, with the severity which has, alas, too often characterised dominant ecclesiastic hierarchies, fear that the entrance of light would be detrimental to unnatural claims. Consequently, all attempts at freedom in these matters, regarded as elementary rights with us, are drastically suppressed, and so the dissatisfaction continues and is ever on the increase. Such seems to be the situation, and certainly is very unsatisfactory.Smouldering anger and political unrest are everywhere in evidence. But before there can be a revolution there must be something more than unrest at political disabilities, and anger at religious coercion.
Those who carry these burdens must be told how they can throw them off, and must see how they can replace what is discarded by something better. If we look back again to the French Revolution for a moment, we remember that certain conditions obtained which apparently are not in existence in Russia to-day. Voltaire and Rousseau preceded the Revolution and apparently did much to hasten it. The former wrote against a corrupt church, in a style so lucid, and with a wit so cutting that nothing could stand them. But he did more than this. He and his allies asked that all things should be done by the King and his ministers according to reason. This seems very elementary but it cut the ground away on which the monarch and his advisors stood and the people saw this. Rousseau's writings were even more dynamic still, though they seemed so harmless and simple.
He insisted that all had equal rights, and that the people ought to govern themselves holding that they knew by experience their own needs far better than those who undertook to govern them, and that as the people were always good and just, they would never act tyrannically as kings and
of the Three Estates, that is the repre-
conditions obtain in Russia today.
The nobles and the people make
by which the people can make their voices heard and their demands
Promised Land of freedom or into a
worthy grave.The consequence
the laws, and the people groan under
freedom from enforced military service,
which obtains both in Great Britainand America, compulsion to serve in the
sacrifice and, at the same time, find the

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

(To the Editor of the CHINA MAIL.)

Sir—Surely, my friend, "F.T.C." must be dreaming. When "F.T.C." you call work-degrading—you must mean idleness; the term degrading ought not to be applied to honest work. Now, where do you really think the more to be admired, the woman who works, or the woman who idles? And if women are physically and mentally strong enough, why shouldn't they work?

But apart from all this, it is very nice of you to wish to exclude from anything connected with "Colonial supremacy".

"Because," you say, "it is a depressing effect upon the general conception".

Oh, "F.T.C." is this a joke?

It is true that people who are commercially supine suffer from depression. I would I could feel some of that pleasure too. It would be such a chance to be depressed by the weight of my many bags.

And, do you mean, "F.T.C.", that you can't be civil to a woman who supports herself? or that if she attains riches by her own exertions that you will be rude to her?

Oh, "F.T.C.", you just be different to other men, who are, as a rule, very civil to rich women, and not so polite to poor ones.

Is a seat in a public conveyance of more value than a lucrative profession? Or can a woman who makes money for herself hire a reserved carriage in a railway train without you could not get in before her, or refuse her a seat, my "F.T.C."?

"Women," you say, "should be educated to believe they are in existence to continually administer sympathy, kindness, gentleness to men; to gradually inculcate them with acts of unselfishness and generosity."

But while they do all this for men, my "F.T.C.", what are men going to do for them? According to law each man can only marry one woman, and granted that he always supports her after marriage (in many cases he doesn't) what is to become of the "great army of unmarried women"? Men cannot expect them to be sympathetic and kind, unless they are willing to supply them with all those little things that prevent them from getting them for themselves.

Yours, etc.,
SIMPLE SIMON.
HONGKONG, January 27.

A CASE FROM THE MAINLAND.

An Alleged Notorious Character.

As a sequel to one of the numerous armed robberies that have recently been reported from China, Ts Fa Min, a man with several aliases, came before Mr H. H. J. Gompertz, at the Magistrate's, this morning, at the instance of the Chinese Government, who sought his extradition on charges of murder and armed robbery in the Fuk Tung village in the Kwangtung Province. Mr H. E. Pollock, K. C., instructed by Mr Harding, appeared for the prosecution, and Mr John Hastings for the accused.

Mr Pollock, in opening the case, said that the facts as they would be given in evidence were that on October 2, last year, at about 11 p.m. a gang of robbers broke into the family house of two brothers, surnamed So. The house was occupied by these men, together with their wives and two servant girls. The latter were sleeping in a room of a passage leading from the street door. When the robbers first came to the door they woke the inmates and the brothers heard the sound of two revolver shots. Eight or ten men then rushed into the house, armed with revolvers and swords and some of them carrying torches.

The robbers, after firing the shots, burst into one of the brothers' rooms and, having dragged him out of bed, the prisoner caught him by the arm and, pointing a revolver at him, asked him where his money was. He replied that he had no money and the prisoner struck him on the shin with the butt of his revolver and then took his keys and, leaving one of the men to guard their prisoner, the rest of the robbers searched the house and took $340 in silver, jewellery valued at $300, clothing valued at $120. The robbers then visited the other brother's room. He, having considered discretion to be the better part of valour, had taken refuge under the bed. He was dragged out and searched. His wife was also searched and their property stolen.

A noise in the street then frightened the robbers and they left the house. On going into the girl's room it was found that one of them had been shot and was lying on the floor bleeding from a bullet wound. Two revolver-bullets were picked up in the room, one of which had apparently passed through the girl's body.

Evidence was then called, detailing the facts as stated, and had not concluded when the Court adjourned.

FATALITY IN THE HARBOUR.

A drowning fatality has been reported to the police which occurred during the storm yesterday morning. At 3 a.m. a fishing boat with a crew of four men left Shamuspoong for Hongkong and when about half way across the harbour was struck by the squall and capsized. Three of the men swam round in the water for some time and eventually clung to the bottom of the capsized boat, but the other man was not seen again and appears to have been drowned almost as soon as the boat turned over.

The three survivors sat on the bottom of the boat for two hours in the wind and rain, and were being carried down the harbour by the tide, until when of the rescued man anchorage they were rescued by another fishing boat, after suffering considerably from the exposure.

TRAINING NOTES.

The attendance on the race course this morning was large, and included several ladies. His Excellency Sir Matthew Nathan, attended by his A. D. C. was present, and displayed considerable interest in the pony.

Sir Paul Chater is one of the most regular of attendants, and this morning was clear but cold, and the track was very heavy. The times, therefore, were rather slow, despite the fact that most of the ponies used the inside course, which is always faster than the outer one. About the best gallop of the morning was that of Mr Potts' Nanking King, which after going for a long gallop finished the last quarter in 31 seconds. Cling and La France Ross did good gallops, and Ladybird showed great improvement. Pickanniny, however, showed poor form, and it is questionable whether this pony will be fit in time for the next Zouche. Zouche, with May in the saddle, was out before the dawn broke, consequently the time was missed.

The following are some of the times taken:—

H. M. S. "Moorhen" has gone into dock at Kowloon owing to having met with an accident while cruising in the West River which damaged a number of the plates in her bottom.

For the information of captains of deep sea-going vessels the Captain of the steamer "Yangtze" reports that a new light has been established on Leongoda Island off Vancouver Island. This is the first intimation of the existence of this light.

At 11 o'clock on the morning of the 17th instant a Japanese war-ship stopped the British steamer "Dobrynia" of 1,542 tons register, and upon examination she was found to be carrying provisions, machine oil, and shipbuilding materials, and bound from Kiuchau Bay to Vladivostok. The steamer was captured and sent on to Sasebo.

Mr J. G. Aikman, a member of the syndicate engaged in the attempt to refloat the R.M.S. "Australia," reported in December that operations were progressing favourably, and that by about the middle of January he would know whether the vessel could be refloated and brought into port. The steamer "Federal," which has been chartered from a Sydney firm, was expected to arrive at Melbourne shortly with the necessary gear, including powerful pumps. Mountain divers are at work patching up holes in the hull and covering them with concrete. When this work is completed the pumping plant will be set to work to remove the water from the compartment, and thus it is calculated, will cause the vessel to rise off the rocks.
